Father DARKLEAF'S Column

Wherein the Editor Gets in a Personal Touch

Our sympathies to one of the "boys" over at the hotel. T'other night they decided to muzzle an opossum and put it Dr. Swing's bed. However, while in the act of getting the muzzle on, the critter took a bite at SOMEBODY'S finger.

R. W. Burkey tells the best yarn of the week. He recalls that when a youth he went squirrel hunting one day, and his dog treed a nice squirrel. He was on one side of the tree and the tree and the dog on the other. The squirrel came down at tremendouous speed and as the dog opened his mouth to grab it, the squirrel jailed right into the dog's mouth. Such writhing and rolling one never saw— but the squirrell stayed down and the dog lived for several more years. Boy, oh boy, that's one for the records.

* * *

L. M. Wilkes came in yesterday and Father Darkleaf noticed a piece of paper pinned to his necktie. And what's that for? we asked. Oh, that an order for cabbage plants I didn't want to forget, he said.

* * *

Disgn and data: Stepin' Fetchet's real name is Lincoln Perry (he named himself after a race horse and then a race horse was named after him); it is said to be harder to get Carter Glass' name over a recommendation for a job than any other man in Washington; McCall Frazier holds a cigarette between his third finger and thumb; nomination for best radio program, certain laxative's Sunday amateur hour; the father of Jud Evans of the T. D. died this week; 104 arrested in Lynchburg liquor raids; but new places have a mushroom birth; after his car wrecked Saturday, Andrew Smith said he'd rather have a wooden axle; I'm open for a byelcle trade myself.

Alfred O'Brien Captures Deer

With the use of a new car and a good pair of legs, Lt. J mes R. Nichols, Jr. and R. A. O'Brien gave Virginia sportsmen a lesson in deer hunting on the night of February 15. While driving along the Roxbury road Lt. Nichols stunned a doe when his car collided with her, whereupon she scampered off torough the swamp. Arriving on the scene shortly afterward, R. A. O'Brien, educational advisor of the camp, gave chase for some distance through the Chickahominy swamp and finally captured the frightened and bewildered animal. She was found to have lost one of her hind legs during hunting season, but in other respects was perfectly normal. A permit from the State Game Department has been secured, by Mr. O'Brien for the custody of the animal and she is now the acclaimed company mascot, raising in a large enclosed area on the camp property.

Drewry Honored

Hon. P. H. Drewry, representative of this district in Congress, has been made chairman of the important National Democratic Congressional Committee. This is the most important purely political post on the Democratic side of the house.

Before his election to congress 14 years ago, Mr. Drewry had a brilliant career of party service. He was a campaigner for the late representative Frank Lassiter, of Petersburg before he was 21 yars old. Later he campaigned with Bryant in the west in the 1896 election and has held important posts in congress during his 14 years of service.

One of the reasons for picking Mr. Drewry for this new post is the fact that he is not considered to be vulnerable to defeat by a Republi-

New Road Projects

Three Local Projects Offered In Prospectus By Shirley

In anticipation of new federal funds for road work in Virginia, state highway commissioner Shirley K. Cunningham, has prepared a list of $25,000,000 in road projects for consideration.

Included in his list are the following items, of concern to this section:

Appomattox to Phenix: $150,000.
Scottsville to Dillwyn: $350,000.
Bridge over James River at Bent Creek, $0,000.

Work on these projects would not be considered without a large federal appropriation.
